Bouchra Jarrar is now officially haute couture

THE French designer has been elevated to a permanent place on the haute couture calendar.

The French commission de classement couture création has upgraded the Cannes-born designer from her 'guest' status to a permanent place on the haute couture tree.

"I would like to thank the Fédération Française de la Couture as well as the haute couture members for welcoming me into this noble institution," said Bouchra Jarrar.

A former studio director at Balenciaga under Nicolas Ghesquière, Jarrar then joined Christian Lacroix as couture head of design, before setting up her own namesake couture label in January 2010.

"I have a profound respect for the history of Parisian couture from the '50s and the '60s", explained Bouchra Jarrar, about the origins of her work, and her desire to "reveal the elegance that we all possess, even if we don't always know how to express it."

The move brings the total number of haute couture status fashion houses to 15, from the classics like Christian Dior and Chanel, to new admissions like Jarrar and Alexis Mabille, and so-called 'correspondent' members like Giorgio Armani (who shows under the Armani Privé label) and Valentino. Guest members for January 2014 shows also include the revived Schiaparelli label and Serkan Cura. - Relaxnews
